

Interesting Loan
A Word for Calvin
110 Miles P. H. by Rail
Some Prudential Sons
By Arthur Brisbane

THE TESTIMONY OF Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan in Washington interests the country. That the great banker and his partners have paid no income tax during the past two years is not surprising. Losses in that time more than offset earnings with a majority of rich Americans. In 1929, when times were good, the 20 Morgan partners paid to the government eleven millions in income taxes.

What is really interesting, especially to President Roosevelt, is the fact that the house of Morgan, greatest international banking firm in the world, lent money to Mr. Norman Davis (the money is still owing), who represents, talks and makes promises for the United States at League of Nations meetings in Geneva.

No one doubts that borrowings by Mr. Davis are business-like and protected by collateral. But the average American would have thought it more fitting if the spokesman for the United States, promising, among other things, that the United States would meddle in future European wars, had NOT borrowed from a banking house with important branches in London and Paris.

To receive encouraging, enlightening letters from clergyman is most gratifying. From South Omaha, Neb., the Rev. Leon C. Hills, D. D., pastor of the Wheeler Memorial Presbyterian Church, writes:

"As you found something good to say, even about the terrible, I was wondering if you might not have some kind word to write about John Calvin. A thousand good things can be said of John Calvin."

Better than any non-Biblical writer he formulated "The Duty of Man," and in notable words, "TO KNOW AND DO THE WILL OF GOD."

His admirers regret that John Calvin should have approved the burning alive of the learned Dr. Michael Servetus. And they doubt the statement that Calvin ordered damp wood for the Servetus bonfire. "To judge by the burning last January."

However, men must be judged by their times and by their intentions. It was customary, in Calvin's day, to burn heretics. Let it be a sacred duty, to turn your religious energy in the 19th century.

Calvin and others believed that Servetus was fighting against the will of God, and Calvin would have preferred that Servetus be beheaded, rather than burned.

A learned man, a marvellous hard worker, one "who never deserted a friend," and a devoted Christian was Calvin, convinced that no man had had anything to do with the Bible, in very word written by God himself, that all men are responsible for Adam's fall, for which sin and corruption attach to us all.

Sincerely is the great thing, and Calvin had it.

It is an honor to quote from the Rev. Dr. Hills' letter. "I desire to have you know how much I appreciate your article. I have been practically every one of the short editorials appearing in the syndicated press for the last few years. I believe I read them in May, 1925."

"I may not always agree with you, but you can cause even a preacher to think to a better advantage after reading your clever sentences. I have quoted you frequently in sermons."

"The article entitled, 'Human Fish, Looking Upward,' is a masterpiece. One of my public school work, seventh grade."

"Several weeks ago I had a very short editorial inspired by an interview with you. I have been thinking of you about the great Tolstoy and those few sentences. The article had been read by a book or two on the subject."

"Your editorial on 'Tvan the Terrible' was another masterpiece."

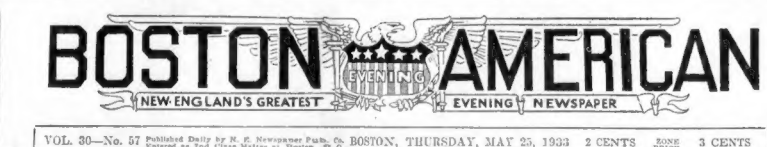

A telegram from William Averil Harriman of the Union Pacific announced the construction of the new passenger train by the Union Pacific, with the words, "I assume it will interest you."

It is more than interesting, vitally important to transportation, and the future of railroads. The picture shows a passenger train, 80-mile-an-hour train, that will run over the Union Pacific in the month of June.

Supporting a very long, white passenger, has four sets of wheels supporting three cars, with no visible separation, or division. The whole train, weighing as much as one ordinary heavy Pullman car, will be made of aluminum alloy, possessing the strength of ordinary steel, with one-third the weight, or stainless steel, or as strong as ordinary steel, set.

MADDOO LOST ON MORGAN SHARES

Partner in Firm Made $146,250; Coolidge Name on New List

BULLETIN
Washington, May 25 (AP)—Evidence that J. P. Morgan & Co. has sold $6,000,000 of securities to the public since the World War was presented today to Senate investigators.

George Whelan, Morgan partner, testified his total profit on Allegheny Corp. stock sold by the firm to a special list of customers was $146,250.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, May 25 (INS)—Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury, lost $3565 by investing in stocks handled by J. P. Morgan & Co., he told the Senate banking inquiry today.

McAdoo said he purchased Allegheny stock on three occasions from the Morgan firm at the instance of Russell C. Effingham, a partner in the firm.

McAdoo was listed by Morgan as one of the "favored customers" who bought Allegheny stock from the House of Morgan at $20 when it was selling at $5 to $7 a share on the exchange. The stock later hit a peak of $57.50, and McAdoo got 500 shares at $20.

"I bought the stock as an investment," McAdoo earlier said. "I don't see what explanation is necessary. I got 500 shares and paid $10,000 for it."

Recess Likely to Get New Expense Data
McAdoo took a seat at the head of the committee table and spoke earnestly to Senator Cullen (R), Michigan, who forced publicity of Morgan's client lists, after the objection of Senator Carter Glass (D), Virginia.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, intimated the hearing would be recessed this evening until next week. He said counsel needed time to work upon some documents.

Morgan was talking with Senator Keam (R), New Jersey, when Chairman Fletcher of the committee near their chief.

Will Rogers, humorist, took a chair back of the press table. Just behind him was Mr. Stue.

Schwab Is Cheered by Upswing

New York, May 25 (AP)—Charles M. Schwab expressed optimism today in the trend of current events and urged business to stand firmly behind President Roosevelt's plans for economic recovery.

The chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation spoke to the American Iron and Steel Institute, which he headed. He approved the President's idea of government partnership in industry, but said that "industry must regulate itself wisely and for the public good if it is to escape regulation from without."

The speaker, steel-making expert, urged industry to set up unemployment reserves voluntarily to provide against distress in any future depression.

"I feel better about our situation today than I have for many months," he said. "The improvement which has come about in the past few weeks has given us all new hope."

"Speaking for the steel industry, I have declared, 'I say that we gladly accept this offer of partnership.'"

The progress toward profit making in the steel industry, Mr. Schwab said, is already under way.

U. S. AND JAPAN CLASH ON NAVY

Geneva, May 25 (INS)—Japan and the United States clashed open today for the first time since the disarmament conference began.

The conflict was precipitated by an unexpected Japanese demand for virtual naval parity with Great Britain and the United States.

As an opening wedge for attaining naval equality with the other two big sea powers, Naotake Sato of Japan, urged the adoption of the article in the present British disarmament plan which binds the signers of the Washington and London naval treaties to the limitation of these plans.

Norman H. Davis, American ambassador, retorted, refused to admit that the Japanese proposal.

He admitted deletion of this particular section of the British arms limitation, disarmament, but maintained it would have a deleterious effect upon public opinion in the United States, Japan, and London treaty countries.

ANTI-HILLER RIOTING IN N. Y. DIED

Police Draw Guns; 13 Seized in Outbreak Waiting Nazi Agent

New York, May 25 (AP)—Rioting broke out today at the North German Lloyd Line pier in Brooklyn in connection with the arrival in America of Hans Weidemann, a crowd of 100 men and women anti-Hillier, awaiting the arrival of the Nazi official, began rioting when it was learned Weidemann had been transferred from the liner Columbus to a tug and taken to the Battery in Manhattan.

Displaying banners condemning "The Nazi murder and terror regime," the crowd turned on the 50 uniformed police and 30 plainclothesmen, throwing bricks and bottles at them.

The progress toward hand-to-hand combat with the rioters and arrested 13 men and women, the latter being taken to the station.

Order was restored only after police drew their guns and shot at the rioters.

More than a score were injured, including four policemen, one of whom suffered a fractured right arm.

MORGAN, LAMONT—NOT WITHOUT WORRY

During his two days as star witness in the Senate banking investigation, J. P. Morgan was calm and unperturbed. His partner may well face the questioning Pecora with poise almost as great. But this picture shows that the heads of the House of Morgan are not entirely unworried. Lines of concern are clearly etched in the faces of both Morgan and his partner, Thomas W. Lamont, as they confer in the committee room. (International News Photo.)

CHILDREN ARE VICTIMS OF SAXONVILLE TRAGEDY

Police Accuse Parent After an Autopsy by Medical Officials

Framingham, May 25 (INS)—An autopsy on the bodies of Chester Dzyeshski, 7; Irene, 11; and Eugene, 5, who lost their lives in a fire in their Saxonville tenement home today, revealed that they had been beaten over the head and their skulls fractured with a blunt instrument.

Their brother Paul, 5, who is in Framingham Union hospital with his mother also suffered a fractured skull and police charged Mrs. Nellie Dzyeshski, the mother, with murder.

Deputy Fire Marshal E. W. Shumway discovered that the fire, which endangered the lives of 11 other persons in the house, had been set in three places.

Police stated that Mrs. Dzyeshski, during a family quarrel, had been beaten over the head and had been set in three places.

Police stated that Mrs. Dzyeshski, during a family quarrel, had been beaten over the head and had been set in three places.

The father of the family, also named Paul, was out of town. He is a foundry worker and was said to be in Boston looking for work.

The fire started on the first floor near the front stairway.

The weapons used to beat down the children were sought. At first it was thought to be a hatchet but later this theory was discarded.

Mrs. Dzyeshski, who leaped from a front-story window, at first was unable to talk. She was visited by Chief of Police William W. Higgins and State Detective Edward J. Sherlock and Edward O'Neil and was reported to have made a statement.

FOUL PLAY HAIRED

Eugene apparently did not have time to leave his bed for it was there that their bodies were found by firemen.

Bill Demanding a Label on Sweatshop Goods Before Ely for Signature

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

With the spotlight of publicity focused on the 750 Massachusetts sweatshops, State Senator William S. Conroy of Fall River today prepared to effect his sweatshop label bill which will permit consumers to know what they are buying.

The bill is now before Governor Ely for his signature. It will serve to acquaint the public with products manufactured under conditions that do not subscribe to humanitarian standards or to a living wage, thereby indirectly protecting legitimate industry.

"It is gratifying to see in print the names of those unscrupulous manufacturers who have for the past five years exploited men and girls in the sweatshops of Massachusetts," the State senator said.

"Conditions are just as bad as the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser have stated and, in many instances, worse. I am convinced that if we had had this publicity five years ago when I first heard of low wage industries coming into Fall River and conducted a thorough survey of them, we should not now be swamped with hundreds of parasitic employees.

"These men are nothing but parasites upon our social, educational and industrial life.

Making Girls Work Free "to Learn How"

"In the survey made five years ago we found countless firms not paying any money at all for the so-called teaching or instructional period. Of course this was just a racket to take advantage of young girls who have demonstrated that one hour's instruction was sufficient to enable them to qualify as efficient in some of the needle trades.

"Several of the firms were discharging the girls after this so-called learning period was over, with the result that most of their stitching was being done with no cost to them but at great expense to the women employed.

"Conditions at present warrant most drastic action by the law-making body of the Commonwealth. Indifference on the part of the lawmakers would tend to bring about a condition which would place upon the community and the Commonwealth for years to come a burden in the form of taxation that could not be shouldered by those who are already overburdened under the heavy load they are compelled to carry.

"It is my hope that at the next session of the Legislature we shall have a mandatory bill which will be declared constitutional. In the meantime, we hope to have the benefit of the sweatshop label bill which is now before Governor Ely for his signature, a bill I introduced last year and which I re-introduced this year with Senator L. Theodore Woolfenden of New Bedford as co-sponsor.

"Remembering Governor Ely's splendid statement in the Sunday Advertiser of last Sunday we confidently expect that my sweatshop labeling bill will soon become law."

In Chelsea four girls under 16 are employed in shoe factories that paid them for 48 hours a week employment $1.23, $1.48, $3.11 and $2.99. These pay envelopes are of last Saturday, and represent a full week's work in each instance.

These girls, who should be in the classroom fitting themselves for high-type employment in later years, were forced to go to work because of family financial straits.

45 Cents For Day Made Her Quit Job

They should be at continuation school, at least half a day, yet nothing has been done about their all-day employment, forbidden by law, in these Chelsea shoe factories.

At the Lucky Boy Clothing plant, Fall River, two girls worked half a day cutting threads and each girl made 12 cents for an afternoon's labor. This company, published as a minimum wage offender, pays no attention to a living wage scale for workers.

A young girl, an experienced stripping worker, employed at a machine finishing garments at the B. and G. Brasier factory, Woburn, showed a recent pay envelope for little more than $7, representing a full week's work.

"I worked hard all week to get that, too," this 19-year-old girl explained. "We are paid about 9 cents a dozen for finishing buttons, 25 cents per dozen for girdles, and 26 cents per dozen for corsets. Working at top speed it takes me at least two and one-half or three hours to earn around 20 cents. I can't possibly make more than $12.50, $13 or $2 for a full day's work when we are busy, and during the slack season I only average $3 to $6 weekly, although I go to the factory every morning at 8 o'clock and stay until 5:30 p. m., with 45 minutes off for lunch.

During the slack season I sometimes sit around for several hours before getting work. The last two months I have averaged from about $6.50 to $7.50 per week.

"Well, I can't complain about the pay, I average from $10 to $12 a week during rush seasons on piece-work," another girl chimed in.

One girl, Betty, however, reported that she got discouraged and quit after working for B & G day a few weeks ago. She said:

"I was put to work on piece rates at a single needle machine sewing in satin fronts on girdles, putting darts in, and sewing the seams. I worked as hard and fast as I could all day from 8 a. m. to 12 noon, and again from 12:45 to 5:30 p. m.

"Guess what I made working like a slave all day? Forty-five cents! I didn't even go to the office to collect the money. No more factory work for me. I take care of children now. Of course, I can't get much money for this either, but at least it's much nicer work."

Firms Posted by State as Unfair

Still another girl, who has worked for this same concern for several years, reported a regular wage of $8 a week.

"The day workers get a 10 per cent bonus about Thanksgiving time and another similar cut about two months ago. Of course when we close up shop for a holiday during the week I get one day's less pay subtracted from my $5 at the end of the week," this girl said.

The B. and G. Brasier Co., has likewise been advertised by the minimum wage commission as a firm refusing to comply with the strict minimum decree that entitles apprentices under 17 years to a weekly wage of $5, apprentices 17 years or more to $10, and $12 to all experienced help 17 or older.

Similarly, the Lincoln Shirt Co. of New Bedford refuses to give employees a living wage and has been published by the minimum wage commission.

The majority of the girls working at this factory earn less than $8 a week on piece rate basis. Few make $10 or more.

In a recent survey on this factory 11 girls were found earning less than $3 for a week's employment; 35 between $3 and $4; 30 between $4 and $5; 45 between $5 and $6; 40 between $6 and $7.

Is a little better than nothing? The inevitably unthinking answer to this question, when it concerns wages and when the little means more patience to thousands of girls working in Massachusetts' 750 sweatshops, is "Yes."

And to this falsely-premised idea usually tagged the bromide phrase: "A half loaf is better than no bread at all."

On this hypothesis, the sweatshop manufacturer operator is taking unfair advantage of the need for employment at any cost and under any conditions.

Yet, translated into terms of human striving and accomplishment, the balance is all wrong, when girls, working a 48-hour week and in countless instances longer than that, however forbidden by law, under not very beautiful conditions are receiving only $3, $5, $5.50, and even $3 for their efforts.

Hopes For Better Days Yet to Come

Anna B. of Fall River said that no less than $4 a week, which she makes in an underwear factory, she could not afford to take the car to work, as she walked two miles morning and evening. Then she discovered that her cheap little shoes were wearing out and that her weekly envelope was just paying for her shoes, her lunches, a few clothes and leaving nothing for her board at home.

Yet she continues to work on such a scale in the hope of having a job when "better days are here."

Investigation by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser and civic organizations disclosed that 90 per cent of the manufacturers paying the $3 to $5 rates are those in the new industries that have flocked into Massachusetts to avoid paying the fair rate of wages established by unions in New York and elsewhere, coming on the invitation of real estate men with vacant factories to sell, of industrial bureau secretaries intent on justifying their jobs by showing an increase in new firms.

With the rushed need for giving jobs to people during critical times of unemployment, no one stopped to ask what contribution these men could make to the community, what their labor record had been in their previous locale, what their plans for the future were to be.

Asked one such employer if he didn't realize that Massachusetts had a minimum wage law which was put on the statute books to prevent exploitation of labor and which provided, in substance, that there be a minimum rate reestablished for all industries showing depressed wages.

"We know about such a law, he said, adding with a laugh: "But it is not mandatory."

"Besides," he added, "effort agencies call me up all the time and beg me to hire girls."

And as lamentable liquidation of labor continues.

Man Who Wants to Work Asks for Job

An appeal for a home or a job or both, for Joseph Matthews, 60, temporarily of 17 Temple Somerville, is made through the Boston Evening American. In good health and steadily employed until the restaurant in which he worked went out of business, Matthews has been left homeless and penniless. He is described as a willing worker who would be the opportunity of earning his room and board somewhere, perhaps on a farm, by hard work.

GIRLS SILENT TO KEEP JOBS IN SWEATSHOPS

Working girls have learned what it means "to put up with and shut up" in order to hold their jobs. This they have done as they have wandered from factory to factory in search of better working conditions that were not there.

More typical stories, selected at random, vividly narrate the experiences of Boston working girls. In their own words, these girls picture their industrial history of low wages, long working hours and dissatisfaction.

CASE NO. 1

"After finishing the third year of high school I went to night school for two years. I graduated in 1932, when I was 19 years old, and got a job during the Christmas rush, trimming men's waists. The wages for the boss was a driver, and didn't allow us to speak.

"The next year I worked during the Christmas rush in a stationery company, making scrap book covers, at $2.00 per week. There was a lot of trouble about rent periods, and the only way I could get down while working was to get there early enough to get a seat. Even then I didn't have it long because some one always took it the minute I got up.

"Next I found this work in a necktie factory. The most I ever made here was $3.00 for one day. It's piece work, and the rates are 1 1/2 cents for making a dozen neckties. It used to be 10 cents, and the girls could earn $20 weekly. It's up to us what time we get in in the morning, and we have to work until we get all the work out that is started. I've been waiting a week for business to pick up so they will call me back to work.

"Once when work was slack in this place I worked three days in a pickle factory, and then was sick in bed for a week with grip. The vinegar I used burned my hands. Inexperienced girls get $3 a week there, and experienced ones $11.

"My father is sick, my two older brothers aren't working now, and there are three children younger than I am. I don't earn much, but it's all the cash we have, now that our city aid is all in groceries.

"I went to Trade School for a year and took hand sewing, but my mother couldn't find me any finger, so last year I went to East Boston high and finished the second year. Now I am 16, and my family needs the money, so I'm working.

"Since the first of January I have had a job in a shoe factory. I have worked every day except when a strike was on. Before the strike we worked from 7 a. m. to 5 p. m., with half an hour for lunch. Now we begin at 7:30 a. m., and have an hour at noon.

"We make women's shoes here, which sell for $2.00. I do piece work, cementing French cord on uppers. The rates, which depend on the style of shoes, are anywhere between 7 cents and 12 cents a case. There are 36 pairs of shoes in each case. The most I can do in a day is 12 cases, but there isn't always enough work. I only did 7 cases today.

"I earn $3 to $4 a week, and could make more if the foreman didn't make us girls do our own stitching.

"The foreman here used to swear a lot before the strike, and sometimes insulted the girls. He's not so bad now, though he doesn't care if we live or die."

(MORE CASES WILL BE GIVEN TOMORROW.)

Result of investigations convinces us that the only way to learn your nation's history is over a tapped wire.

Four years at a keyhole is a lesson in international finance. Why build all those magnificent monuments to progress and industry when most directors meetings have been held under flat stones?

Well, we're learning how the big boys make an honest dollar out of four poorer quarters.

That's something. In the meantime, stocks, cotton and wheat all jumped from one to five points yesterday.

We're so tough now that bad news is a tonic. (Copyright, 1933, Distributed by Universal Service, Inc.)

Ely Goes on Air to Explain 25 Millions Revenue Bill

Explanation of the $25,000,000 new revenue bill now pending before the House committee on ways and means and an appeal for its passage were included in a half-hour radio address by Gov. Ely, broadcast over Station WBZ.

Gov. Ely contended that the revenue provided by the bill and additional funds secured through application for federal aid under the La Follette-Costigan bill, would assure the state $50,000,000. He declared this would bring about a restoration of municipal credit, relief for individual taxpayers, stimulation of the real estate market and means and an appeal for its passage were included in a half-hour radio address by Gov. Ely, broadcast over Station WBZ.

WOMAN BEATEN AFTER SLAP

Mrs. Ellen Robicheau, of Watts St., Malden, 21-year-old mother of two children, had only one regret today. It was that she hadn't swung the milk bottle instead of merely having slapped the face of an offensive male in Malden last night. Had she done so, she would not today be suffering from a nose bruise and two punches.

With Mrs. Madeline Maher, 23, of Pine St., Malden, she was en route to the store carrying an empty milk bottle and singing to herself when two young men walked up behind and suggested a quartet.

The women paid no attention to them, whereupon the men became abusive and Mrs. Robicheau slapped the face of one. He threw a handful of gravel and a stone hit her in the face. When she tried to swing the milk bottle he pushed her on the forehead and on the

He Picked Spot for Lemons

Louis Malendin, 19, of Fleet St., North End, was before Judge Elijah Adlin in Municipal Court today, charged with occupying a portion of a public street, selling merchandise without a permit.

"What street and what was he selling?" asked Judge Adlin. "He was selling lemons on State St.," said the arresting officer.

Judge Adlin smiled. "Young man," he said to the defendant, "don't you know that selling lemons on State St. is reserved for bankers?"

"I didn't know that, your honor," said the youth.

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"Become a banker," said the boy.

And Judge Adlin filed the charge, while everybody smiled.

PRIVATE SLACK APPEARS IN PERSON WITH WAR PICTURE "FOUR ACES" SOON TO BE SHOWN AT THE PARK THEATRE

Picture Shows Life in the Front Lines

Clayton K. Slack, ex-private of the 124th Machine Gun Battalion, Thirty-third Division, of the United States Army in the A. E. F., and only living private holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor, is in Boston to appear in person with the official motion pictures of the World War, which opens a seven-day run at the Park Theatre.

In fulfillment of popular demand, Private Slack has compiled "Four Aces," the most unusual moving picture ever photographed. It shows the horrors and hardships in the trenches more vividly than any Hollywood film ever approached.

SOUND EFFECTS
Adding of sound effects are the finishing touch to the scenes which are compelling and spectacular in their reality. A thrilling scene shows the infantry going over the top accompanied by the great rolling artillery barrage in the Argonne Forest. Here the cameraman caught wave after wave, advancing infantry spread out in battle formation over a wide, level sweep area. The scope of these scenes, both visually and audibly, have never been approached by any studio picture. "Four Aces" shows four big battles—Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, Argonne and Hindenburg line.

Slack's own experiences are interestingly interspersed. His own version of the thrilling encounters in France tell vividly of the many dangers to which the Americans were subjected. Near Cossovo, October 8, 1918, observing German soldiers under cover on the left flank, 30 yards away, Slack on his own initiative, rushed them single-handed and captured ten Germans and two heavy type machine guns, thus saving his company and neighboring organizations from heavy casualties.

At the beginning of the Meuse-Argonne battle, the 33d Division was pivoted with its right flank on the Meuse river. The task before them was to execute a turning movement, driving the Germans back from there and across the Meuse. This was accomplished during the first few days of the battle and on October 8, the date on which Pvt. Slack won his right to the Congressional Medal of Honor, the 33d Division crossed the Meuse and assaulted the Germans on the right bank.

Waiting under the protection of a roadside embankment, Slack's unit was waiting until the order for the advance were to be given. Looking to one side, Slack saw two Germans crawling along, carrying boxes which could be nothing more or less than machine gun ammunition. This indicated, according to Slack, that a machine gun nest was located at the American flank.

War Hero Here

Clayton K. Slack, ex-private of the 124th Machine Gun Battalion, 33d Division, A. E. F., is to appear in person at the Park Theatre pictures of the World War.

Slack's own experiences are interestingly interspersed. His own version of the thrilling encounters in France tell vividly of the many dangers to which the Americans were subjected. Looking to one side, Slack saw two Germans crawling along, carrying boxes which could be nothing more or less than machine gun ammunition. This indicated, according to Slack, that a machine gun nest was located at the American flank.

Slack notified his sergeant and asked permission to clean up the nest. Although the officer refused the request, the order lacked the note of finality. So Slack took a rifle and started toward the enemy group.

There were nine or ten Germans, as nearly as Slack could determine, and they were rather widely separated. In describing this situation, Private Slack said: "I took a long breath. Then I jumped up and cried, 'Hands up, and run directly at them with my bayonet in position. These men were so surprised and frightened that they put up their hands and cried, 'Kamerad, mercy, kamerad' and they backed away from me with their hands held high over their heads. I still had the idea in the mere as they jumped up one by one out of the shell holes, and after hiding places, but they held their hands high and made no motion to pick up their guns. I had no surprise then that they thought I was but the first man of a pair and that others would follow behind. They had all left their guns when they jumped up. One was an officer and he tried to trick me into telling him to back and get his coat, but this was out of the question. I ordered them back to my outfit and they started ahead of me."

Leadville Blast Sets World Record

Leadville, Colo., May 25 (AP)—Mining engineers estimate it will take several years to remove the ore broken in a dynamite blast which experts described as the largest underground shot in mining history.

Slack's own experiences are interestingly interspersed. His own version of the thrilling encounters in France tell vividly of the many dangers to which the Americans were subjected. Near Cossovo, October 8, 1918, observing German soldiers under cover on the left flank, 30 yards away, Slack on his own initiative, rushed them single-handed and captured ten Germans and two heavy type machine guns, thus saving his company and neighboring organizations from heavy casualties.

This indicated, according to Slack, that a machine gun nest was located at the American flank.

Medal Is Honor Enough

When Private Slack stood at attention to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor, Gen. John J. Pershing, who made the presentation, is said to have ventured the opinion that Slack had done more than he to win the war. According to the story, Slack modestly declined the added honor, however.

The ex-soldier was one of twenty-three medal men to be honored in Washington at the time of the burial of America's Unknown Soldier.

VETS PLAN FOR POPPY SALE

The annual Buddy Poppy sale sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars will start next Saturday. Proceeds of the sale will be used for the work of the Veterans of Foreign Wars among crippled and impoverished war-veterans.

"The need for a successful sale of Buddy Poppies was never more vital to the welfare program of the Department of Massachusetts V. F. W. than it is this year," said Peter W. Tate, state commander, in announcing the sale.

Chicago, May 25 (U.S.)—Paul Ash, jazz orchestra leader, filed suit for $50,000 damages today against the Music Box cafe of Chicago for circulating libelous, as he charges, saying that he and his orchestra were appearing at the cafe, when in fact they were engaged elsewhere.

In Politics Gossip About People You Know

GOODWIN SPEAKS UP
A definition of a "country squire" was given his colleagues by Senator Angus L. Goodwin, of Maine, after several members had confessed they did not know what the term meant during a discussion of a lawyer's bill. "A country squire," explained Goodwin, "is one who writes legal documents for a de-funct client who afterwards has to spend good money to pay a good lawyer to figure out for him what was meant."

Slack Honored by Many Mayors in Nationwide Tour With War Films

Private Slack has been feted by scores of mayors of the larger American cities in his nationwide tour. Obviously he is questioned in detail as to his feat concerning the capture of the ten German soldiers and their machine gun nest. This daring action, without orders, was responsible for his Congressional Medal of Honor. Slack would need several additional wounds to carry the many "keys of the city" he has received in his travels. He is keenly interested in American Legion work and, whenever possible, he's a visitor at the various veterans' hospitals maintained by the government.

Mussolini Reviews Motorcycle Parade

Rome, May 25 (AP)—Premier Mussolini attended a motorcycle, today reviewed 30,000 motorcyclists who rode past him with terrific din. The occasion was a celebration by the organization called "Centauri" of Italy's entrance into a victor at the various veterans' hospitals maintained by the government.

Wound Stripes Are Missing

Gold service stripes were quite the thing when the war was over and as the veterans returned from foreign shores the gold wound stripes increased in number. Although Private Slack spent eight months overseas, many of which were spent in the front lines, he returned without a stripe on his right arm. He suffered two minor flesh wounds, however.

Explains Army Life for Students

Addressing school classes has become a rather important task for Private Slack. Students, evidence unusual interest in his many medals and decorations and are eager to learn first-hand facts from a man who has been in the thick of the fighting. Slack has many historically accurate facts to relate, most of which are used in his personal appearance in conjunction with the film "Four Aces."

Lost Battalion Is Extolled

Private Slack tells intimately of the "lost battalion" of the 77th New York Division and "Go to Hell" Whittlesley, who commanded it. He praises Whittlesley as one of the bravest of the brave.

"They were picked to break the Hindenburg line at its strongest point," he said. "They did it. They were later praised by King George as performing the most heroic act of the war in carrying on when Germany had cut off their first wave."

Slack's own experiences are interestingly interspersed. His own version of the thrilling encounters in France tell vividly of the many dangers to which the Americans were subjected. Near Cossovo, October 8, 1918, observing German soldiers under cover on the left flank, 30 yards away, Slack on his own initiative, rushed them single-handed and captured ten Germans and two heavy type machine guns, thus saving his company and neighboring organizations from heavy casualties.

One was an officer and he tried to trick me into telling him to back and get his coat, but this was out of the question. I ordered them back to my outfit and they started ahead of me."

Slack's own experiences are interestingly interspersed. His own version of the thrilling encounters in France tell vividly of the many dangers to which the Americans were subjected. Near Cossovo, October 8, 1918, observing German soldiers under cover on the left flank, 30 yards away, Slack on his own initiative, rushed them single-handed and captured ten Germans and two heavy type machine guns, thus saving his company and neighboring organizations from heavy casualties.

At the beginning of the Meuse-Argonne battle, the 33d Division was pivoted with its right flank on the Meuse river. The task before them was to execute a turning movement, driving the Germans back from there and across the Meuse. This was accomplished during the first few days of the battle and on October 8, the date on which Pvt. Slack won his right to the Congressional Medal of Honor, the 33d Division crossed the Meuse and assaulted the Germans on the right bank.

Waiting under the protection of a roadside embankment, Slack's unit was waiting until the order for the advance were to be given. Looking to one side, Slack saw two Germans crawling along, carrying boxes which could be nothing more or less than machine gun ammunition. This indicated, according to Slack, that a machine gun nest was located at the American flank.

Slack notified his sergeant and asked permission to clean up the nest. Although the officer refused the request, the order lacked the note of finality. So Slack took a rifle and started toward the enemy group.

There were nine or ten Germans, as nearly as Slack could determine, and they were rather widely separated. In describing this situation, Private Slack said: "I took a long breath. Then I jumped up and cried, 'Hands up, and run directly at them with my bayonet in position. These men were so surprised and frightened that they put up their hands and cried, 'Kamerad, mercy, kamerad' and they backed away from me with their hands held high over their heads. I still had the idea in the mere as they jumped up one by one out of the shell holes, and after hiding places, but they held their hands high and made no motion to pick up their guns. I had no surprise then that they thought I was but the first man of a pair and that others would follow behind. They had all left their guns when they jumped up. One was an officer and he tried to trick me into telling him to back and get his coat, but this was out of the question. I ordered them back to my outfit and they started ahead of me."

Wound Stripes Are Missing

Gold service stripes were quite the thing when the war was over and as the veterans returned from foreign shores the gold wound stripes increased in number. Although Private Slack spent eight months overseas, many of which were spent in the front lines, he returned without a stripe on his right arm. He suffered two minor flesh wounds, however.

Explains Army Life for Students

Addressing school classes has become a rather important task for Private Slack. Students, evidence unusual interest in his many medals and decorations and are eager to learn first-hand facts from a man who has been in the thick of the fighting. Slack has many historically accurate facts to relate, most of which are used in his personal appearance in conjunction with the film "Four Aces."

Lost Battalion Is Extolled

Private Slack tells intimately of the "lost battalion" of the 77th New York Division and "Go to Hell" Whittlesley, who commanded it. He praises Whittlesley as one of the bravest of the brave.

"They were picked to break the Hindenburg line at its strongest point," he said. "They did it. They were later praised by King George as performing the most heroic act of the war in carrying on when Germany had cut off their first wave."

Joan Blondell and Belle Baker
Guest Stars During Rudy
Vallee Hour Tonight

By N. F. F.

That little "butterfly blonde" as photoplay patrons have come to know her, is quite the striking opposite from fickle "party girl" parts she plays for the films. What's more the real Joan Blondell desires the world to know it. Pleasing she will sing "I Want to Be a Sailor" when Rudy Vallee introduces her during his well known weekly hour behind the "mike" this evening (WEEI) from 8 until 9 o'clock.

Blues song singing a la Belle Baker and by that same lady, is another attraction Rudy will cause to be relayed up and down your street and mine tonight. Also the "Sister of the Striped" allusion with white Ed East and Ralph Dumke did network turns awhile back—remember? That's the Rudy Vallee cast of characters, not forgetting his own crowning contributions softly sprinkled here and there throughout as usual.

MATTER OF HOURS

Advices from National Broadcasting Company headquarters indicate King George of England is to speak in London on June 12, opening the World Economic Conference and will be heard all over Uncle Sam's back yard at 8 a. m. Now the contemporary Columbia network head man would have us know His Majesty holds forth at 3 o'clock in the afternoon that day. Meaning in connection with the same auspicious occasion. However, the Royal remarks will hardly last six hours, but rather a matter of straightening out over-schedule. The King here rumors about the King planning to switch his hour as a courtesy gesture to the American audience. By jingo, the "column" here even gets into the act, setting at the Court of St. James. Watch for the change.

Vincent Lopez and his orchestra furnish tunes during the Jack Barrow Manchuana. Pearl variation period tonight (WEEI) at 8, all of which originates in Chicago.

TRACK ATTENTION

Ted Husing heads toward the Hub Saturday from New York, to tell of the Harvard intercollegiate amateur track and field meet, the description of which follows hereabouts may hear between 2 and 3 o'clock (WAAB) broadcast from the Stadium. Looks like though stern old "Jawn Harvard" has relented and allowed the ban slapped on the worthy young broadcaster.

Afterward, meaning 5:35 to 6, our own local Mr. Linus Traverser networks a summary of the above events (WYAC) for all America to hear over CBS chain facilities.

Aircaster Says:

Broadcasters
Miss Big Bet

The importance of Chicago as a source of novel radio entertainment seems to be growing. Perhaps the alertness of its studio showmen has been intensified by national interest in the World Fair. Closely following the announcement that a Chicago savant would undertake to gauge the intelligence of the radio audience by means of a WJZ broadcast, comes the news that, on June 1, the Northwestern University will stage, on the same network, a demonstration of the scientific detection of crime.

Between 10:30 and 11 p. m. on that date, listeners-inners will sit in on the practical application of the lie detector and a police known as truth serum by which, theoretically at least, subjects under observation may be forced to tell the truth. These scientific gaugings will be under way by courtesy of the Crime Detection Laboratory of the University, and Col. Alvin Goddard will be in charge of the experiments.

But with all their alertness, I think the showmen in Chicago have missed a big bet with regard to this broadcast. They have failed to note that it will be simultaneous with the show featuring Jack Pearl, the air's Baron Munchausen. It was almost criminal negligence on their part not to merge the two broadcasts and serve the lie detector and the truth serum to the Baron's glib and tall narratives.

CRIME FADING OUT
The indications, along Radio Row, point unmistakably to a dy-

dodging vehicles or from the constant pounding of a crowded community and they need to be protected from overstimulation. Parents who wish to improve the quality of radio programs in their children's lives, will find assistance in the following suggestions: (1) Listen to the children's programs with the children; (2) Find out why children like or dislike certain features; (3) Write to the radio station for conference with other parents to evaluate the program; (4) Write to the radio station commending programs; (5) Write to stations protesting against disapproved programs and (6) Choose with discretion programs suitable for child listeners and did not those which are objectionable.

CHICKEN SALAD WITH VEGETABLES

Cut cold chicken in dice, marinate in French dressing, using tarragon vinegar for the acid. Also marinate three small tomatoes which have been peeled and cut into thirds or quarters, if size permits. Have ready one cooked cauliflower, separate into flowerets and marinate also. Mix the chicken and one cup of celery, which has been cut in very fine pieces, and heap in the center of a flat dish, making a pyramid. Mask the mixture with tomato mayonnaise. Arrange leaves of lettuce around the salad, and on them close to the salad, alternate sections of cauliflower and tomato (drained from the marinade to make the inner weath.

Tomato Mayonnaise

Strain one can of tomatoes and simmer until reduced to six tablespoons. Fold into ½ cup of mayonnaise dressing and add

¼ teaspoon paprika to increase red color.

The Boston University annual senior poll is over. The ballots have been counted and seven beautiful coeds have been given class cognomens by their classmates at the college of liberal arts. The appellation of "Teacher's Pet" was given to Miss Mary Stetson of Melrose, who had very little competition in this race. The senior who was most likely to succeed was found to be Miss Muriel E. Dineen of Malden. She won this title by her great record at the college. Ruth F. Jenkins of Brockton, was named the friendliest senior and her election met with the hearty approval of all. Poor Miss Jean C. Palumbo of Nahant was named the "Most Glibbie" senior, while her friend, Doris M. Bowie, of Milton, was awarded the title of the "Cutest."

Irene Maki, of Abington, was named the "Class Flirt" and the biggest "chiseler" in the college was found to be Miss Gertrude M. Carlson of Norfolk. The seniors' poll is always a big event at B. U.

SMITH IS NAMED SOCIETY GIRL M.C.O.F. RANGER TO WED STAR

High Chief Ranger Ralph A. Smith of Charlestown and other newly elected officers of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters were installed today at the second and closing day of the 84th annual convention at the Hotel Statler, attended by 1200 delegates. Installation was by the degree team of Cheverus Court, Charlestown.

Flourishing of marriage intentions at the convention revealed the approaching marriage of George W. Kuehn, former Harvard football and track athlete, who was graduated last June, and Miss Katherine Rust of Reservoir ave., Chestnut Hill.

Catholic Actors' Guild in Benefit

The Catholic Actors' Guild of America will for the first time in its history give a benefit performance in Boston.

PISARON POST TO VOTE ON GIVING UP THE LEGION

Members Meet Tomorrow to Decide on Action in Dispute

Whether or not the future membership of the Crosscup-Pisaron post will resign from the ranks of the American Legion will be decided at a special meeting of the post to be held tomorrow night.

The meeting was called today by Thomas A. Fitzgerald of Newton, commander of the post and son of the late Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, to discuss the suspension of the post's charter until Aug. 20 yesterday by the executive committee of the Massachusetts State Department of the Legion.

The post charter was suspended until August 20—the day after the state convention ends at Holyoke—because of alleged criticism of State Commander James P. Rose and the latter's stand on national economy affairs of President Roosevelt.

Seventeen of the 22 members of the state executive committee debated five hours at the State House before the suspension was ordered by a vote of 16 to 6. No announcement was made as to the identity of the dissenter but it was learned that John D. Crowley of Cambridge, state department treasurer, upheld the cause of the post.

Commander Fitzgerald issued the following statement immediately after the suspension:

"The action of the State Department in suspending the charter of the Crosscup-Pisaron Post until after the August convention will be brought to the attention of the post's membership at a special meeting to be called within a few days."

"I am unable at this time to officially state what action the post will decide to take in view of the suspension."

"However, I have reason to believe that many of our members will be in favor of resigning in a body in protest against what they believe to be an unjustifiable action, unworthy of the high ideals which inspired the creation of the American Legion."

Bankers Warn of Holding Companies

Care supervision of holding companies was recommended today to delegates attending the 13th annual convention of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks in the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

A special committee of savings bankers which made this report pointed to the growing trend toward numerous plants as a threat to existing good policy.

"One of the greatest evils has been the robbing of operating companies by their holding companies," stated the report. "Losses are made by the holding company, the holding company in no event should be given collateral security which ranks ahead of the bonds outstanding."

C. F. Panhard, New York public utility and statistical expert, said the savings bankers that some "very holding companies were organized merely for the purpose of evading the high credit standing of the individual banks."

The report also had obtained in order to obtain funds for wholly speculative purposes.

He said there was a mounting murmur of complaint by customers because of the fact that rates which they are compelled to pay must take into account the need for supporting superimposed capital structures.

DRIVE LEADERS SEE VICTORY

Leaders of the renowned Boston Emergency Relief Campaign were confident of success today after reports of all committees engaged in a special drive showed increased progress in their canvassing.

The trades group of the war committee, a new group in the drive, shows the most notable success with an additional long list of firms for which meetings of employees are to be arranged. The industry and finance committee is arranging similar meetings with good results.

HYDE CO. STRIKE SETTLEMENT IS POSTPONED

Awaits Second Parley Between Russell and Strikers

Hope for an early amicable settlement of the 9 week strike at the Hyde and Sons Shoe Co., 40 Cornhill st., East Cambridge, received a setback today when it was revealed that a second conference between Mayor Richard M. Russell and strikers and officials of the plant is to be held before the case placed before the state board of arbitration.

The second conference will be held shortly, Mayor Russell announced today, with no date definitely set.

Definite terms, not discussed at the first conference held Tuesday, will be decided at the next meeting and plans made to bring them before the state arbitrating board.

William Zeigman, an organizer for the National Shoe Workers' Association, announced that the strikers committee were drafting their final arbitration terms to be discussed at the next conference.

"Unless an agreement is reached whereby the Hyde Company unites with other shoe and leather factories in having a closed shop, all conferences will be useless," Zeigman said today.

Among the other terms decided upon already by the strikers, Zeigman said, are raising wages, eliminating the "yellow dog" contract, improvement in sanitary conditions at the plant, appointment of stewards to settle minor differences among the workers, equal division of work, elimination of hards in which he included the payment of fines and the selling of lottery tickets to the employees.

Max Hyde, an official of the shoe firm, has already stated that the company would not unite with the association.

More than 300 last night attended an open air meeting at Cambridge and Willow sts., East Cambridge.

ALL IN A DAY'S TRAVELS . . . The Fair Things are wondering when Norman Vaughan, one of the more elusive eligibles, is going to say good-bye to bachelor days and ways and declare himself engaged to the attractive Titan-haired beauty to whom he has been devoted for the past three years . . .

We can perhaps help you out to the extent that we know Norman and Abby Beveridge, daughter of Mrs. Albert M. Beveridge of the North Shore and Indiana, have been going places together for a long time and are the best of friends. Mr. Vaughan has had a most interesting life since he left college, having been one of the lucky ones who travelled with Admiral Byrd on his explorations to the South Pole, and we understand he will make research his life work. Miss Beveridge is a blossoming author and has traveled extensively, which gives them an interest in common . . .

Miss Beveridge is tall, slim and light-haired and dresses smartly . . . Her brother, Albert, announced his engagement to Miss Elizabeth Scafe of Milton about six months ago. Whether or not Mr. Vaughan's devotion (and it is devotion or we have never seen it in our lives) will eventually lead to the altar or to the South Pole we cannot tell you at this writing . . . but we would take a small bet on it!

Speaking of the Vaughan family (and why not speak of the Vaughan family) we hear that Mrs. Janice Vaughan Smith is seriously considering at LEAST two offers of marriage, one from a handsome Britisher. We are considering writing a book about American wives and English husbands . . . perhaps you had better wait until it is published before you decide, Mrs. Smith? You know we have an E. N. O. in OUR family and can at any rate speak from experience . . .

Winsor School Graduates Gather

IT WAS A GRAND OLD MAY DAY at Miss Winsor's School yesterday . . . the charming founder of the school, Miss Winsor, a lady of three-score years maybe, graced the occasion by her honorable presence and one of the oldest graduates, Mrs. Harvey Bundy of Washington, was also present. (Mrs. Bundy you remember is the wife of Harvey Bundy who left Boston with his family to accept a splendid position under the Hoover regime but is back home again under the Roosevelt rule.)

Many of the old graduates gathered around the May Pole to watch the girls in their white frocks and daisy chains dance on the green . . . a box lunch was in order and was served by paying girls at the field house, coffee in lily cups included. The guests of honor spoke briefly and a happy reunion was enjoyed by all. May Day at Boston's most exclusive ladies' finishing school is not very different than a May Day at any other nice school . . . is it?

Edith Wolcott has been ill for a short time in New York but is very much better . . . you know she was in an automobile accident last fall and only recovered in time to get back home for Christmas. Hard work as a pupil nurse at a New York hospital has set her back a bit and she was ordered off for a brief rest. These girls who will go down on their hands and knees to be near their heart's desire restore one's faith in ROMANCE . . .

In passing, may we add that Charlie Evers is still playing professional baseball in the Big City . . .

Rebonds from our rumor of the divorce of the "Bobby" Bowlers aver that the decree will be granted in June . . . if not sooner. Mr. Robert Bonner Bowler, Jr., comes from a fine old family hereabouts and his wife, the former Winifred Eggleston of "Eggleston," Hyannis, will very likely charge cruel and abusive treatment, although no one could imagine Robert in the part of a cave man . . . but such is divorce! Mrs. Bowler has social aspirations, his noted, and was elected to the Junior League last year.

Alice Burrage to Make Debut

AT THE PLAYFAIR THE OTHER EVENING we noted a number of the elite mixing things up with a group of banksters . . . Mr. and Mrs. Russell Burrage, who have a debutante daughter, Miss Alice, coming out this fall, were drinking the health of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. R. Lester Sewall (Lella Stevens) who were married in '31 were having a gay time with Mr. and Mrs. George Cutts Vaughan . . .

We glimpsed Mrs. Anne Dennett Paulton swaying in the arms of an old flame, a suitor of days before she married Mr. Paulton, whom she divorced last year or so, you remember . . . figure it out!

Jimmie Roosevelt and wife, Betsy, were night-climbing it together . . . James enjoys relaxation after business hours and is often seen in our smart evening resorts trying the light fantastic . . .

Caroline Hunnewell looking just as nice as always with a new dress (not Charles Pierpont this time) . . . and Bobby Ellsworth and her shadow, Dorothy Forbes, were trying to look sophisticated as they sipped the cup that sometimes cheers and sometimes quens . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Woods and the John S. Amorys were either from out-of-town noted and we saw Mr. Horace Soule with a girl, which is all we can tell you about that . . .

Mr. and Mrs. R. Lester Sewall and their new baby will spend the summer at Prince's Crossing at the home of Mr. Sewall's mother, Mrs. Rufus L. Sewall, who is going to be in Europe during July and August.

Chatty Notes of Social Circles

THE ITALIAN JUNIOR League will close its social season for the year 1934-35, with a May party tomorrow evening at Longwood Towers. Miss Louise Ruffini, president, has appointed a committee for the party. The committee consists of Miss Ruffini, Miss Marion Rott, general chairman, Miss Josephine Phillips, Miss Zoe DiPietro and

MR. AND MRS. B. DEVEREUX BARKER, JR., who were married Saturday at a brilliant reception at the Ritz Tower. Mr. Barker is in New York for a few days. On their return they will spend the summer at Marblehead Neck, before taking up their residence at 138 Marlborough st.

A WARM MAY AFTERNOON MEANS hours of joy for many of society's debbies of the future and these two little ones were having a grand time (under the watchful eye of a governess) when the cameras came along. The taller girl is Jane Goddard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amory Goddard of Otis pl. Her mother will be remembered as the former Evelyn Cole. Her little playmate is Mary Elizabeth May, daughter of the G. E. May, of Chestnut Hill, who came in town to be Jane's guest.

BOOKS—And a Name of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

LETTER TO A YOUNG WRITER Jermy transports you, as he talks to, to some of the scenes of their youth, but only to those events which will have a bearing on the later development of this man and woman.

Curiously enough, with the arrival of your letter came a reminder from so late a friend that Harper & Brothers, disclosing the fact that they had just issued, during the last two weeks, three novels by totally unknown writers. These are "The Enchanted Winter," by Margyn Hare (Z. G. Hare), "Family Reunion," by Janet Curran Owen, and "Prelude to Departure," by Sylvia Paul Jermy. I have read only the last named thus far, and it is of that I wish to speak to you.

If you can turn out a piece of work only half as good as this, you will be a find a reputable publisher. I don't know when I have come across an initial book so full, not only of promise, but so packed with surprise and eloquence; a novel so entirely lovely so rich with feeling, and so extraordinarily constructed. It is modern, never, but it is also traditional in many ways. It keeps on the track. It is compact, but leaves much to the reader's imagination. There are indications that the youthful author has admired writers like Zola, Gals and Willa Cather—fine that matter.

I wish you would study this book. Fine effects have been achieved in a masterly way. You know in the very first pages, the relation of Charles and Daley, and the general tone of the picture, traced there in its true portion. There was a sure hand. Miss really big way; how he finds this occupied, his need of her, as she her need of him. Here is a very fine. A few strokes, and the picture is miraculously there. Such a scene may have been written a dozen, two dozen times, before it was finally set down. Jermy of these excellent craftsmen.

Study the manner in which Mildred is brought into the tale. She quietly enters, toward the end, after the path has been made clear for her, and she dominates the later scenes of the book, as she dominates the earlier ones. Note, too, the swift motion and how firmly she marched on her

Beer Great Puncher
May Beat Herr Max
Buccola's Opinion
By JACK CONWAY

I find a crown being that Max Baer is able to win over Max Schmeling when they battle under the direction of Jack Dempsey in New York on June 8.

MR. BOSTON

"I would not be surprised if Baer licked Schmeling," said Phil Buccola, manager of Vittorio Livan, Odonne Piazza and other boxers. "Baer is a powerful fellow, standing six feet one inch and weighing 200 pounds when in condition. I had Livan boxing on the Garden at New York the first time Baer and Schmeling met. It was a terrific fight with Schmeling's experience giving him the edge in the final rounds. The loss of the decision did not discourage Baer the least. Back in the dressing room he admitted it was Schmeling's experience that upset him. He asserted that with another year's experience he would defeat Ernie He did.

"Baer never backs away. He hits hard with each hand, and is able to take a punch better than the average run of heavyweights. In fact, Baer's only serious weakness is the recklessness with which he takes an enemy sock.

"Remember the Tully Griffiths-Jack Gannon bout in Philadelphia? Tully was rated with the leading heavyweights in the world at the time. He left his jaw unprotected and Gannon knocked him out with a terrific right hand punch."

Baer Has Great Power in His Body Punches
Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, is another person who has high respect for Baer.

"Nobody has been able to hurt Baer since he became a professional," said Buckley. "He was knocked out by a boxer named Abbott on the coast when he first started boxing, but you can throw that one out.

"Baer is a terrific body puncher. He also punches well to the jaw. His left is as dangerous as his right. He is by far the hardest hitter Schmeling has been called upon to face. He has an excellent chance to defeat the German."

Another Chance for Lutze
Nick Lutze, colorful California, will receive another opportunity to crash his way into the Hall of fame when he meets Jumping Joe Savoldi in a finish mat bout, best two falls out of three, at a Paul Bowser show at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. Savoldi is the most talked of wrestler in the world as a result of his recent victories over Jim Londos and Strangler Lewis. If Lutze can defeat Jumping Joe, he can write his own ticket for a return bout with Ed Don George or a match with Jim Brown.

Lutze, a fast, brilliant wrestler and with plenty of crowd appeal, has been up around the top for several years. He has just missed becoming champion Nick is the most popular wrestler who has shown here during the past five years. As champion, he would sell new box office records.

Lutze will have experience in his favor when he collides with Savoldi. He is also every bit as fast as the former Nott Dame star who has crashed to fame as a result of his ability to jump in the air and knock his rivals cookeyed with a drop-kick.

In his only Boston appearance, Savoldi won from Count Zary noff. Jumping Joe wrecked the Count with a drop-kick. In New York last Monday night, Savoldi added Strangler Lewis to his list of victims.

In Frisberg, giant Swedish wrestler, will try to unmask the Blue Masked Marvel in the semifinal.

Simmons Is at Peak, While Ruth Is Slipping
I believe Al Simmons is a more valuable baseball asset to the Chicago White Sox than Babe Ruth is to the Yankees. This is because Simmons is at his peak, while the Bambino is slipping. In his appearance here, Simmons proved he is one of the great stars of the National pastime.

Ruth at his best was a greater ball player than Simmons is today. But Babe has been going back for a couple of years. He has been obliged to favor himself, and under such circumstances cannot be expected to show to his full advantage as a young and more reckless ball player.

Random Shots at the Target
Joseph F. Conway announces the University Club will hold its Athletic Night Friday evening. . . Harry Kipke, Michigan basketball coach; R. O. Crier, Princeton; Lou Little, Columbia; Chick Mehan, Manhattan; Dr. W. E. Maxwell, Missouri; and Lawson Robertson, head track coach of the last two Olympians, and Eddie Collins of the Red Sox will be lined among the speakers. . . Phil Troy tells me the Red Sox will keep improving. By the time the club goes on its next road trip the popular assistant secretary looks for the club to have the edge on most of its rivals. . . Dusty Cooke would develop into one of the best hitting outfielders in the American League. He takes a fine cut at the ball. . . In the outfield, Cooke covers a great deal of territory, and races up Duffy's Cliff like a mountain goat. . . Dynamite Dunn, who has shown in wrestling bouts at Mechanics Building and the Arena, is seriously ill at Forest Hills Hospital. Charley Gordon tells me he will turn over all the receipts of his show on next Tuesday night to Dana. . . The wrestlers have agreed to kick in with their purses. . . The only expense in connection with the show will be the rental of Mechanics Building. . . A star program will be offered.

Eli Netmen Named for Title Tourney
New Haven, May 25 (AP)—Members of the Yale tennis team will compete in the intercollegiate championship at the Yale tennis school at Lake Havard, Pa., the week ending May 28. The team is coached by Coach William E. Hinchcliff, and includes Capt. Bob Hastings, Capt. Charles Lynch, and several other members.

St. Mark's Defeats Groton Nine, 13-6
Frisco deflected to give St. Mark's school a 13-6 victory over Groton school in the 4th district school rivalry. St. Mark's triumph was its 15th in the series. Deffman made four singles in five times at bat, scored three times and walked in two other runs.

HE'S UP-AND-HE'S OVER

The gentleman lying down on the job here, so to speak, is Duncan McNaughton of the University of Southern California. As a Canadian Olympic champion, he high-jumped 6 feet 3 1/2 inches. Duncan arrived here in fine fettle for the intercollegiate in the Harvard Stadium tomorrow, and Saturday. Duncan looks like an easy winner but watch George Spitz of N. Y. U. and Yale's Keith Brown. Things will be looking up in John Harvard's track pasture!

Loss of Kline Blow to Sox in Series With Cleveland

By JOE CASHMAN
Cleveland Indians lost their strongest of the American League's western pitchers from the Red Sox first home stand against the distant rivals to a close in a four-game engagement, started this afternoon at Fenway Park.

The Chicago White Sox as present have three men who should be able to handle the Indians. Manager Peck has a clean bill of health and a better outfit than a good effect a weapon in his hand.

Joe Peck, who has been a star since he came to the White Sox, has been a star since he came to the White Sox. He has been a star since he came to the White Sox.

Tobacco B lost a point after showing a fractional gain. Auburn Auto ran off 2 points along with U. S. Steel preferred before rallying signs showed.

Commodities had a heavy tone.

Additional statistics were in evidence, indicating the significance of the business recovery. The Federal Reserve Board reported that its seasonably adjusted index of industrial production rose 7 points from March to April. In the latter month it was 67 per cent of the 1923-1915 average, and compares with a low of 58 per cent for

DOWN MEMORY LANE... WITH AUNTIE BELLA.

Scientists have suddenly decided that friction from incessant winds will forever prevent progress through the stratosphere. And the rest of us decided long ago that friction from incessant winds prevents progress here below.

ONE ON MR. FINKS

(Lester, Mr. Donors)
George Schreiner was showing a little number eight shotgun he had, up here on the square, Wednesday afternoon. It was no joke, Mr. Finks told him. It wouldn't shoot a hole in my hat. Butting the action he called his headpiece into the air. George deftly slipped a loaded shell into the breach of his little gun and fired on the hat. The charge of shot tore a hole in the side of it, nearly as big as a man's hand. Mr. Finks merely laughed and said he guessed he'd have to get himself a new hat.

"The trouble with this is it's a w-i-t-y," sneered Genevieve, the kitchen cynic, "is that too many people are trying to wear a high hat on a low brow."
